

Regional/Land Use Planner
Lamoille County Planning Commission
Morrisville VT

Join the planning team in one of Vermont's premiere recreation destinations. Lamoille County includes the ski resorts of Stowe and Smugglers' Notch as well as extensive four-season outdoor opportunities.

The Lamoille County Planning Commission seeks a versatile, results-oriented planner with experience in community development or local and regional planning. This position requires an understanding of municipal and regional planning as well as federal and state planning law. Some knowledge of Natural Resources and Transportation planning as well as municipal zoning bylaws, subdivision regulations, and non-regulatory tools would be helpful. The planner may also assist communities through integrating land use planning and community development with emergency preparedness and mitigation planning initiatives to build community resiliency. This position requires effective written and spoken communication skills, including the ability to translate planning concepts, data, and technical language into a form that is meaningful and accessible to a broad range of local and regional officials.

Applicants should work well with a team as well as independently and should possess a strong customer service ethic. A commitment to public service, creativity, a sense of humor, and a positive attitude are all pluses.

This position offers an excellent opportunity for growth and advancement in the planning field and requires a bachelor's degree in planning or a closely related field and at least 3 years of relevant experience. Salary between $50,000 and $60,000, commensurate with experience.

We offer an excellent work environment and extensive benefits. Please submit a cover letter and resume to Tasha Wallis, Executive Director, at tasha@lpcvt.org. For additional information, visit lpcvt.org. LCPC is an equal opportunity employer.
